VINCENT COLVER, Secretary.

An incidents of army life is the following:—"A new regiment, just from the North, encamped on arington Heights, opposite Wasnington, in 1863, and immediately commenced the duties and discipline required by army regulations. The colonel wanted his men particularly instructed in guard duty and enforced the observance of every detail. He hunself would often accompany the "grand rounds" at night. The "rounds," as every soldier knows, consists of two or three officers and a corporal's squad, who march around to see whether the men on guard are doing their duty. The guard must challenge and halt every person was comes near him, and order him to advance and give the countersizh. On a very dark night a burly, boisterous Englishman was walking his beat, when the officer of the day started on the "grand rounds" and came upon this soldier before he expected to. "Who goes there! Halt !! bellowed the guard, almost in the captain's cars, with a voice that was heard all over the camp. "Good Lord!" exclaimed the officer, deadened by this audden roar, "Good Lord! then advance, one of the apostles, and give the countersign," replied the unterrined guard.

COURT SCRNE IN NEW!ORLEASS.—The following scene is reported to have actually occurred at one of the police courts in New Orleans:—Lawyer—"May I please your Honor, I wish to signe the following scene is reported to have actually occurred at one of the police courts in New Orleans:—Lawyer—"May I please your Honor, I wish to signe the counter-sign," replied the unterrined guard.

The lawyer made some remonstrance. Recorder—"Sit down." Lawyer—"But, Judge"—The lawyer made some remonstrance. Recorder—"I want no argument. I am tired of you lawyers. I will tell the people who you all are." The lawyer made some remonstrance. Recorder—"Gust flowers have had a miguty bad coid that day."
